Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 13 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rain in places overnight. Gradually brightening up through Friday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rather cloudy during the evening and overnight, with a band of mostly light rain stalling over the region, perhaps punctuated by some heavier spells. Drier with some clearer spells to the south later. Locally chilly by dawn, although frost unlikely. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Friday:
Rather cloudy and damp at first, but brightening up with some warm sunny intervals for many later. Fewer, lighter showers then preceding days, with many areas dry into the afternoon. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Rather cool at times, with showers developing widely most days, perhaps heavy and prolonged locally. Some warm sunny spells are still expected however. Slight frosts possible in western rural areas.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.